In providing for provincial education, the Ministry of Education maintains a staff of officers stationed in the provinces. These provincial educators are in point of fact the most important of government representatives in the provinces, for they must be men of high professional, personal and moral qualities.

This thesis attempts to explain the role and functions of these provincial educators. The thesis covers the administration of education in the provinces, the provincial educator's role as proper supervisor of provincial teachers under his jurisdiction and the administration of educational finance.

The writer points out three problems confronting the provincial educator. The first is the proper direction of education at three levels, namely, pre-compulsory education, compulsory education and secondary education. Secondly, the execution of his role as the supervisor of all the teachers in his province. Lastly, the inadequate financing of provincial education.

The thesis also contains the suggestion of possible solutions to the various problems mentioned.
