

ADMINISTRATION OF YOUTH CENTRE :
A CASE STUDY OF THE WERURACHIN YOUTH CENTRE
by Songkram Bumroongchat

In his thesis on the Administration of Youth Centre: a Case Study of the Werurachin Youth Centre, the author places a strong emphasis on the importance of children and youths. He says that the children of today are adults of tomorrow and in their hands lies the future of the country. The problems of the behaviors of young people, especially the more complicated one of child delinquency, are in urgent need of solution. In the opinion of the author, the establishment of youth centres provides one of the solutions to these problems.

The author defines a youth centre as a place with recreational facilities for its young members and enlarges upon the term "recreation". He then gives a brief account of the work in this field, as well as the history, of the Werurachin Youth Centre.

In his study on the Administration of the Werurachin Youth Centre, the author touches upon the organization, personnel, finance and services provided. He also analyses and comments upon its work and makes some useful recommendations for further improvement.

In conclusion, the author believes that interesting programmes of activities for the benefit of its members have done much to attract young people to the Centre. Thanks to these programmes, the youths are kept out of mischief and crime. All this goes to show the important role of youth centres in the prevention of misguided behaviour on the part of the younger generation.
